

Studies Show Most Tap Water Is Full of Chemicals and Germs, and 95% of All Filters Don't Work. So Even If You Use a Filter, Chances Are ...

Your Tap Water Is Making You Sick!

But researchers reveal a breakthrough discovery that delivers great tasting, spring-fresh water ... right from your tap ... while eliminating all of the chemicals and microbes that rob you of good health!

NEW YORK -- If you're like most people, you assume your tap water is safe because your city wouldn't allow bad water to flow from its water-purifying system.

And you probably also assume that because using a water filter makes water taste better, it also protects you from contaminants.

Unfortunately, both of these assumptions are probably making you and your family sick.

Tap Water Is Full of Disease-Causing Contaminants

Most municipal water flows through lead pipes over 100 years old. Arsenic has been found in 85% of our cities' water. And 80% of city water systems are not equipped with filters that meet EPA standards. In addition most cities add harmful chemicals like chlorine and fluoride to their water.

The Centers for Disease Control warns that "one half of the water purification systems in the country sometimes let through the same microbes that, in 1983, caused illness to half the population of Milwaukee."

A recent poll by the Water Quality Association showed that 74% of Americans consider their tap water contaminated and dangerous. 80% don't like the taste. And the following annual figures from the National Resources Defense Council confirm the shocking problem. Every year ...

- ◆ 900,000 SICK due to water contamination.
- ◆ 50 Million POISONED by ingesting radioactive radon and radium from their drinking water.
- ◆ 9,000 DEAD from contaminated water.

And these figures don't even factor in the thousands of long term deaths and illnesses from cancer, high cholesterol, kidney stones, glaucoma and heart disease caused by contaminated water.

Bottled Water May Be Worse

Recognizing the problem with tap water, many Americans have turned to bottled water. Unfortunately, bottled water is not only extremely expensive, it is often just as contaminated as your tap water.

Tests conducted by the University of Iowa on 39 different brands of bottled water found that 29 of them contained chemicals, dissolved metals and traces of arsenic, barium and toluene. The researchers concluded that "bottled water is no better than tap water and, in some cases, even worse."

Ordinary Filters Don't Work

Over 95% of the filters used in America are the kind that attach to your faucet or are built into pitchers and dispensers. These are an improvement over plain tap water, but still not even close to 100% effective.

While they often remove bad tastes and odors, they do nothing to stop bacteria and other poisons in your water like arsenic, copper, lead, nitrates, parasites and numerous other harmful materials.

And these filters become less effective every day because what does get caught by them remains inside and rots. In fact, your water must pass through this accumulated poison before it gets to you.

Distilled Water is Dead Water

Some people choose distilled water for its purity. While distillation removes many impurities from water, it is not 100% effective and has a significant side effect: Distilled water tastes terrible.

Because distillation is a non-selective process, it eliminates all of the essential nutrients in water which give it the crisp, refreshing flavor your body craves.

Not only does distilled water have no impurities and no flavor, it also has no oxygen. It is dead. It simply cannot deliver the vital nutrients your body needs to survive. Even fish will die in distilled water.
